

The Last Lecture

The last lecture presented some ideas that really resonated with me. Especially the points he makes on failure. In my personal life I've always taken failure really poorly and thought that it reflected onto who i was as a person. My mistakes made me feel like a failure so to look at it from a different perspective that failure is the opportunity to grow and that dreams that you don't ever accomplish can still help you grow really stuck with me and i look forward to taking them forward with me into my classes this semester as well as my personal life.